New addition to the EEA team in Brussels

The year 2020 was challenging, and many unexpected things have happened. Even though many uncertainties remain, we are not slowing down. On the contrary, we are expanding our team in Brussels and planning on even more effective engagement in the ongoing policy discussions on the future of the European Union and Europe.

We would therefore like to introduce and welcome the newest addition to our Brussels-based team, Natalia Macyra. Natalia has taken the role of a Deputy-Secretary General for EEA as from the beginning of February. She will be responsible for growing our external outreach and strengthening of our engagement with European Institutions, policy-makers and stakeholders. Natalia has more than ten years of experience in the Brussels environment, where she was responsible for policy analysis, organisation management, and communications. She has a thorough understanding of European decision-making processes, an extensive network of contacts and the necessary skills to expand our relations-building activities. Natalia has also been part of the free-market network and has tirelessly worked to support free trade, open markets and entrepreneurs.

With ever-increasing protectionism tendencies among European leaders, we believe that the voice of employer and entrepreneurs of all sizes must be heard in the capital of Europe. We continuously strive to support the dialogue with European decision-makers, opinion leaders, researchers and experts. Our dedicated team focuses on developing a sound regulatory and market conditions within which business from central and Eastern Europe can efficiently function across the Union, the continent and globally.
