The EEA is developing its Memberships, which strengthens our voice in Brussels and allows for better representation of the Central and Eastern European micro-, small- and medium-sized enterprises."*

The new members strengthen the EEA bringing the membership number up to a total of fourteen.

Damir Filipovic, Secretary-General of the European Enterprise Alliance: "I'm glad that EEA has been increasing its Members' numbers, and we can represent their voices towards the European Commission and the European Parliament. It's crucial to highlight the needs of these organisations and work further on stimulating public-private dialogue in the European Union. We need a stable and competitive Europe, where organisations can present their views and participate in decision-making. Our growing Membership is a tribute to this."
